“ Kelsey was a conversational sniper, listening to everyone talk about the problem and thinking through it before speaking up and cutting right to the point. She could do the same in casual conversation too, but with jokes and insightful commentary. Her viewpoint helped me understand things in a way that I never could have on my own. I'll always treasure the conversations we had, even the ones just about work, on all the days we would sit in a Teams call with our other close teammates while we worked through all of our assignments. She made the team (and the world) better just by being a part of it.
