“ I’ve been contemplating on what to share. Something not so sappy, because I can just hear you saying “man get off the gas with all that.” But really, Sonny I’m sorry. You were such a beautiful soul. We shared so many laughs, jokes and wonderful conversations, you knew just what to say to make me laugh until my stomach hurt and I had tears rolling down my face. I did a terrible job of keeping up with you, but you were also very good at hiding. Your smile was infectious, and your eyes never hid what you were feeling or going through. I replay many of our conversations over and over in my head, I can’t ever look at Jasmine rice without thinking of you and giggling. I looked forward to going to work when I was having a bad day because I knew you’d make it better. I’ll miss you more than you know.
